"FAITH AT WORK: Engineering/Technology/Business"
by
Rev. James C. Ramsey

Texts: Psalm 90:1, 14, 16-17   Preached: 2/24/19
               Colossians 3:12-14, 17, 23-24

We have been exploring what does it mean to take your faith to work with you?! What does your everyday work have to do with the LORD's work? We heard from those who live and work in the field of education, direct-service…and last week we listened to some faithful reflections from the health-care perspective.

Today we are privileged to have more experts reflect on their faith at work. This time from the realm of those who work in an office, in business, engineering and technology. Wherever you work or live, your faith can transform your outlook and guide you through. Whatever our business – it is ultimately God's business. Whatever our task, as the Apostle Paul puts it, we can put ourselves into it, as if serving God, rather than people.

I'm honored to have reflections from Doug Blinn, Jeff Hodgkinson, Sue Vresh and Brian Fill. Doug's up first…

As we worship this morning, my son, Ben, Sam Smallwood and Allie Gray are at the Jubilee Annual Conference for Christian Coalition for Outreach. Ben and Sam, are there with thousands of other college students from all over. Allie Gray, of course, works for CCO and helps organize the conference. It was Allie's idea to do this sermon series, inspired by her work at CCO. When she's back next Sunday, I hope you might tell her that you were inspired by these reflections.

Ben, Sam, Allie along with the rest of the Jubilee attendees and workers are worshiping today with the focus that God cares deeply about our work, no matter what major or field we are in. This year the guiding theme of Jubilee is "Transform Everything." Allie said, "we believe God can do this in every student's life, but not just, of course, in the life of students –but in all of our lives, in and outside of our careers.

In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. Amen.
